

MP pops in to congratulate a new school council team

You're never too young to start having a voice – just ask the members of the school council at Giles Nursery and Infant School.

Each class at the school in Durham Road, Stevenage, elects two representatives to sit on the council, which is consulted on changes to school life.

The 14 new council members were announced during a special assembly and presented with their badge of office by town MP Stephen McPartland, whose wife is a teacher at the school.

Mr McPartland: "I was very proud to speak with each new member and present them with their badges.

"I know they do a great job. It is really nice that so many parents turned up to support the children and the whole school took part in the assembly."

Headteacher Rouane Mendel expressed her thanks to Mr McPartland, adding: "His attendance shows a real commitment to local education and helped to bring alive for the children the real meaning of a school council." Mr McPartland, pictured above with school council members, headteacher Mrs Mendel and his wife Emma, is a keen supporter of school councils. The Giles council was established for years ago, and the model is in use at other primary schools in the town.

MP pops in to congratulate a new school council team

You're never too young to start having a voice – just ask the members of the school council at Giles Nursery and Infant School.

Each class at the school in Durham Road, Stevenage, elects two representatives to sit on the council, which is consulted on changes to school life.

The 14 new council members were announced during a special assembly and presented with their badge of office by town MP Stephen McPartland, whose wife is a teacher at the school.

Mr McPartland: "I was very proud to speak with each new member and present them with their badges.

"I know they do a great job. It is really nice that so many parents turned up to support the children and the whole school took part in the assembly."

Headteacher Rouane Mendel expressed her thanks to Mr McPartland, adding: "His attendance shows a real commitment to local education and helped to bring alive for the children the real meaning of a school council." Mr McPartland, pictured above with school council members, headteacher Mrs Mendel and his wife Emma, is a keen supporter of school councils. The Giles council was established for years ago, and the model is in use at other primary schools in the town.